Expressing its concern that, even after the first United Nations Decade for the Eradication of Poverty (1997-2006), the number of people living in extreme poverty in many countries continues to increase, with women and children constituting the majority and the most affected groups, especially in the least developed countries and in particular in sub-Saharan Africa,

Recognizing that mobilizing financial resources for development at the national and international levels and the effective use of those resources are central to a global partnership for development in support of the achievement of the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals,

Acknowledging that sustained economic growth, supported by rising productivity and a favourable environment, including private investment and entrepreneurship, is necessary to eradicate poverty, achieve the internationally agreed development goals, including the Millennium Development Goals, and realize a rise in living standards, and concerned that global economic growth experienced during the first Decade was in general a jobless growth,
